Capt. Arevalo introduced us to "Mi Madre" as his friends, and she received us very graciously. We were ushered into the living-room and given seats on low cane-bottom rocking-chairs with huge wooden arms, the invariable adjunct of the better-class houses. There were even a washbowl and soap for use on the little landing half way up the steps from the ground, the steps being of wood, instead of a mere bamboo ladder, which forms the entrance to the common nipa hut.

THE PHILIPPINE MUSICETOS.

The Philippine musketo is much smaller than the ordinary one of the United States, but he makes up in viciousness what he lacks in size. He is fearless and I think it was too hot to please the does no good to make false motions at him, for he will not heed them. If he is a banca having two oarsmen, making a stronger expression of the comparative peevish, averse to the singing about the ear a wave of the hand load of six persons in a shallow dugout past the ear does not disturb him; he about two feet wide and fifteen long. This

The officers most all provided themselves with about four yards of musseto bar, which the burner over a manage of the manage of the direction of carry a little sail. Without the outriger the banca is an only obsorbed if we fail to look below hoops erected over their cots when in quarters, or drew over themselves when in the field. The cots used were woven with cane on the bottom, just like the bottom of a cane rocking-chair. This constituted to coolness of the bed, but also to the great of the floor all around the bed they would get beneath it and come up through the lost of the floor all around the bed they would get beneath it and come up through the holes in the bottom, One officer became so angry at the little pests for getting insolating the highest of the middle of the night and derived to drive them out by burning a newspaper, with the result that he set his canopy on fire and almost had the grant took to drive them out by burning a newspaper, with the result that he set his canopy on fire and almost had the grant the first of the land, so that we had to grant turned out with an alarm, and with the forther result that he set his canopy on fire and almost had the grant turned out with an alarm, and with the forther result that he set his canopy on fire and almost had the grant turned out with an alarm, and with the forther result that he set his canopy on fire and almost had the grant turned out with an alarm, and with the forther result that he not in root of the land, so that we had to grant turned out with an alarm, and with the forther result that he set his canopy on fire and almost had the land. So that we had to grant turned out with an alarm, and with the forther result that he not fire and only an acceptance of the most part, and that railway is not yet complete. But assume that we should also the drive them out by burning a newspaper, with the result that he set his canopy on fire and almost had the grant all the proposal turned out with an alarm, and with the forther result that he set his cano guard turned out with an alarm, and with the further result that he put in most of the remainder of the night swearing at both himself and the musketos with commendable impartiality. If the Government desires to experi-ment with the theory that musketos are responsible for the conveyance of malaria, there is a good chance to do so in Ma-nila. This disease constitutes one of the most serious the army has to contend with and adds enormously to the hospital re-ports. My own experience was that while in Manila there was a great deal of sickness in our regiment from malaria, but very little while out on campaign. Con-currently we are annoved to death with musketos in Manila and suffered very lit-tle outside. Because of the low, swampy ground in the city and vicinity, and because of the most running around the wall, and all grown up with grass, these nests broad by the millions there the Government take measures to destroy the musketos and prevent them breeding, and the cases of malaria in the hospitals will fall off to a minimum provided the musketo theory of its distribution is correct. Some of the vast sums expended upon hospitals, invaliding soldiers home, sending out new ones to take their places, and paying pensions might well be devoted to a practical effort to prevent malaria by destroying the mus-ketos, with the final result of saving much money and many valuable lives.

I was awakened the next morning by scussion going on between the pigs and chickens, who had suspended hostilities the enjoyment of a common roosting place for the night, but had resumed them again with the coming of the day. From pitch-darkness to broad daylight

It is dark until the sun points its nose over the horizon, and then it is day. There is no long waning of the stars and gradual advance of the light. The stars are ap-parently stuffed out by an invisible hand. At night there is no gradual fading of the light from the sky. It is beight mult the sun goes down, and then in a few minntes it is completely dark. I have seen our regiment form for parade when the sun was still well up in the sky, and yet have to march in review when it was so dark I could scarcely distinguish the reviewing officer to salute him. Soon after breakfast we wer: taken Soon after breakfast we wer taken through the town by Capt. Arevalo and introduced to a number of important personages, including the Mayor, or Presidente, and at each place we were treated to cigarets and wine or Manila beer. We were especially graciously received by a family of Mestizos of the name of Choiding, consisting of father, mother, and three marriageable daughters. These ladies were not at all backward in expressing their admiration of the "big, strong, brave and handsome Americanos" who had come so far across the sea to fight for them.

Considering the size and athletic appearance of some of my companions, I two I consider were nimed at me personally. This family returned to Manila after it scapture, and we resumed our acquaintance with much subsequent pleasure in a social way. They were very curicus to know all about America, but as we had only a few minutes to remain we neglected a few things.

We made a similar toilet to his, and lay down. Then I investigated my two pillows. They were about three feet long, eight inches wide, covered with a cheap Turkey red cotton cloth and stuffed with limits in force, with plenty of field guns, limits in force, with plenty of field guns, life to it first, and then to getting something that it was utterly unsoldierly they were, and how utterly unsoldierly they were, and how their methods of fighting were, and how their methods of fighting were, and how their methods of fighting on any of us, yet that boatman had dry cigarets and matches.
